ABC of POLITICS

QUEER QUACKERY

In an article in The Daily Telegraph of 26th June Myles Harris, described as "a London G.P." discussed the pros and cons of counselling under the title The Quack Fix. He began by stating; "Medicine has always tried to keep faith with the scientific model: observation, measurement, theory and testing. If the facts upset the theory then the theory must be thrown overboard. "Death rates have plunged". He says, "Today nobody expects his wife to die in childbirth, or to see tiny coffins on the way to the cemetery. Two hundred years ago both events were commonplace". Babies, once born, it seems are presumably now 100% safe from infant mortality. But what death rates have plunged? Dr. Harris goes on to discuss "counselling and an explosion in alternative medicine therapies". Never a mention of the change from "tiny coffins" to the lorry loads of aborted foetuses, without benefit of coffins, carried across cities, countries and even continents to fill the factories and 'scientific' research establishments with the wherewithal to supply cosmetic firms with "improved" beauty preparations; scientists with expendable experimental material: eggs for implant in any "infertile" or lesbian womb whose owner applies for one or more.

Certainly they did not figure in childbirth. They are the results of the murder of healthy but as yet unborn babies. These crimes are euphemistically called "termination's of pregnancy". Then there is the murder of deformed or diseased babies out of the womb; this is called euthanasia. An item in the same newspaper on 5th July reads:

BABY'S KILLING TESTS DUTCH LAW

"The killing of a severely deformed new-born baby by lethal injection is set to become a Dutch test case on infant euthanasia.

Prosecutors have begun the final stages of an inquiry into the death in March 1993 of Baby Maatje, who was born with hydrocephalus, an exposed spinal cord and leg deformation in Purmored, near Amsterdam. A.P."

Even more bizarre is the case of the "lesbian lovers" whose "partners" were artificially inseminated because "they did not wish to go through the (to them) distasteful process of having sexual intercourse with a man; and yet another lesbian lover of a lesbian "mother" was granted "full parental rights" after the "father of the child", who had agreed to inseminate the lesbian once a month until she "fell" pregnant, now finds that the Child Support Agency does not recognise his "legally and unenforceable abrogation of his parental duties" will try to recover maintenance from him!

A BABY DIED

This is Baby Choice, a precious 4 1/2 month old little girl, burned by the saline solution used to abort her. There are 4000 babies aborted each day in America, (one every 20 seconds). Abortion is legal thru the ninth month of pregnancy.

We have been led to believe that having an abortion is removing a mass of tissue. LOOK AT THIS LITTLE GIRL. She is a perfectly formed human being! IS THIS SUCH A GOOD CHOICE?

Photograph and text with acknowledgments to Victory For The Unborn, P.O. Box 690762, Houston, TX 77269-0762. U.S.A.

How many doctors one wonders now take the Hippocratic Oath, which was promulgated some two and a half thousand years ago, part of which reads:

"The regimen I adopt shall be for the benefit of my patients according to my ability and judgement, and not for their hurt or for any wrong. I will give no deadly drug, though it be asked of me, nor will I counsel such, and especially, I will not aid a woman to procure abortion....."

Can it be that, unlike Sodom and Gomorrah, we have not yet been destroyed by fire and brimstone because our "cities of the plain", have not reached the apogee of wickedness of those by the Dead Sea? Perhaps it was not only the sea that was dead, perhaps those Sodomites had also added the gruesome destruction of their own offspring before they ever saw the light of day and had then advanced to the ultimate crime of malforming God's creatures to match man's self-distorted image?

God has never yet repeated himself so what fate awaits the unrepenting destroyers is quite unimaginable.

This terrible trail of perversion once followed "darkly at dead of night" became a "noonday devil" on the morrow of the establishment's unprecedented legislation to allow the performance of acts of buggery by "consenting adults in private".

Back to the "Telegraph" of 26th June 1994, which reported:

GAYS BRING COLOUR TO THE CAUSE

".....an unfamiliar multi-coloured rainbow (sic) flag is flying from poles and balconies in many parts of London." ".....the newly adopted banner of Britain's homosexuals.....". "In Soho's Old Compton Street, London's gay centre, businesses are already using the (flag's) design on cards and advertising leaflets".

"There has been a steady demand since we started bringing them in 14 months ago but in recent weeks they have really taken off".

"David Baker, a gay journalist who flies the flag from the window of his Islington flat, said local residents had reacted very positively".

And just to reassure everyone:

"Inspector Robert Beckley of the Metropolitan Police's Community Affairs Branch, said he hoped the flag's popularity would not lead to attacks by "a tiny minority of yobs and bigots who seek to make life difficult for our gay and lesbian community".

"Luckily we live in a relatively liberal society" he said, "as more and more people fly the flag they should find support in numbers."

If ever a city asked for fire and brimstone or whatever else is likely to strike from Heaven, our capital has.

And in America:

EUGENIC BIOSLAVERY HAS ARRIVED

by Suzanne Rini

Americans were horrified to hear of a proposal from Britain that the eggs of female aborted babies be harvested for egg donation to infertile women. What was eventually turned down in Britain is due to happen here. Except now, there is media silence on the impending unleashing of a massive human embryo research initiative coming out of the National Institutes of Health. That's right, it's your taxpayer money that will be funding an entire roster of gruesome and bizarre research protocols that stand to create, destroy, manipulate and malform human embryos in the preposterous name of improving in vitro fertilization rates of success. Already in vitro fertilization cavalierly destroys "extra" embryos and/or allows couples (or singles) undergoing IVF "therapy" to abort, freeze, and/or donate their "extra" or just unwanted embryos to experimentation. While other Western nations have outlawed the following on a Constitutional basis and have deemed them criminal acts, the United States has had no such Constitutional debate with full public participation and stands to condone:

1. The production of human embryos via in vitro fertilization for pure experimentation, including research on new modes of artificial birth control.

2. The harvesting of eggs from aborted female babies. These would be used for egg donation to infertile women. This protocol has been tagged, "Babies from the Dead," meaning that any resulting born child would have a dead baby for its mother.

3. Producing clones of original embryos through a technique known as "blastomere splitting," a simpler form of creating copies of human beings or parts of them to be grown in culture for experimentation, research or organ farming. Cloned embryos could be cryopreserved and used as "backups" in case the "original" brought to birth through IVF might need an organ transplant, even one that would spell the death of the cloned embryo. A clone could also be thawed and implanted and born via IVF if the couple wanted "spaced" identical children. Or, clones could be produced simply to provide enough DNA for embryo diagnosis which ensures that only a healthy baby will be implanted.

4. Parthenogenesis: This is the surgical removal of a woman's egg, then manipulated to produce a one-parent pregnancy. Parthenogenesis is also cynically called a "virgin birth," that is, one requiring no male sperm. Any children resulting from this technology would be female. Allegedly, Rockefeller researchers Jacques Loeb, in the early years of this century, and in 1937, Gregory Pincus, birth control pill developer, caused the birth of animals via parthenogenesis. The rabbit allegedly produced this way was pictured on a LOOK magazine's cover in 1937. Lesbians are avid to have this technique perfected. They call having only female children by this method "Lesbian Prime."

5. Producing chimeras, that is, humans who would also have animal genes. Already there are transgenic mice and animals. The transgenic mice strains were constructed using the immune system cells of aborted babies. These transgenic mice have been patented by biotech companies such as Systemix in Palo Alto, California and are sold for about $2500 per mouse. The HU and SCIUD-Mouse models are used to test AIDS drugs. Another transgenic mouse model is in the making using the brain cells of babies aborted from allegedly schizophrenic women. These chimeras would be used as research models for studying the inheritability of schizophrenia. Some strains of the AIDS transgenic mouse model and the schizophrenia model were financed in part by the National Institutes of Health in the late 1980s and early 1990s. Via the NIH Revitalization Act of 1993, the NIH itself may seek patents on "novel animals." Thus it is feasible that chimeric human embryos will also be manufactured and patented as research models.

A chimera can also be made by fusing two or more human embryos together. The embryos used for this technique would be of different parentage. Perhaps in chimeras there is an ideological reference, i.e., a "multicultural" being representing the New World Order's propaganda about peace, unity and the end of nationhood? The appearance of animal chimeras cannot be predicted. Some have been born with striped eyes and skin. One member of the Human Embryo Panel, Alta Charo, commented that her only reservation about producing human chimeras is that since the outcome is unknown, "they might experience suffering."

LET US NOW START TO LEARN AND RETHINK PART TWO

INDIA THE WONDER EAST

by Protagoras

Let any caring thinking person look at India. Now there is a nation so well loved by idealists from the sick decadent West. The world's largest democracy, so we are forever being told. India to where so many pilgrims from the unhappy Western world travel to seek some deep soul saving philosophy that we, of course, are lacking in our materialistic Christian civilisation. India is the most religious nation in the world they tell us and being the largest democracy, they have democratically solved so many of their social problems very well indeed. They have a very sensible caste system that keeps everyone happy and in their correct place in society. Under this every one has the vote, that great panacea of all desires and problems. The millions of Untouchables - delightful word - also have the vote but as they are right at the bottom of the social pile they have nothing else. No rights no protection, even the religion helps to keep them in their place, so they are exploited, raped, murdered with very little if any redress from the democratic Government and certainly no outcry from the liberal chattering classes of the West. In 1989 for example there were more than 14000 anti untouchable atrocities recorded, including 759 rapes, 479 murders. Countless other acts were unrecorded because the victims feared the police who were frequently the perpetrators. Often cruelties against Untouchables are considered just part of local customs (The Times Magazine 28th May 1990).

No one denounces India, refuses to play cricket with them, calls for trade boycotts or tells shops not to stock their curry powder. When did you last read of a Church or charity castigating India as they have done so endlessly with South Africa? Throw in the slavery of bond debts, oppressive child labour and you have India beloved adored forever getting vast amounts of aid especially from Britain, where politicians of all parties have an apparent mesmerised terror of ever upsetting this great democracy but meekly bow to endless brick bats and then send out more aid. They can certainly teach us a thing or two. The hard pressed South Africans should have copied India decades ago. They should have given all the Africans the vote but make them Untouchables as in India and treat them so. They would have had no more problems and not troubled the world conscience. I recall reading in a guide book for teachers, one of those delightful books that are poured out to instruct teachers on the backgrounds of the many ethnics that have swarmed in to the UK; that India has by its caste system shown how different races and cultures can exist peacefully together. Quite right too and very wise.

Here in overcrowded Britain we too could learn from India and so solve many of our seemingly unsolvable social problems, many if not most of which, have been forced onto us by our wise leaders over the last few frightful decades. If only we British would realise that our leaders were expecting us to follow the wise Indians. We should at once make all immigrants, whom the indigenous Britons never wanted in the first place, into Untouchables, or Harijans, as they now call them in India, sounds nicer. Give them full democratic rights of course but nothing else. For good measure add in all the permanently unemployed, layabouts, travellers, New Age variety and anyone else who is causing concern. We could then oppress them, exploit them at will even murder a few. We would then too become a well loved nation offering the world so much and be able to pontificate endlessly on any other country's wrong doings.

Divorce now a very worrying problem in Britain could be helped a lot if again we copied the wise Indians. Out there it is quite common to set unwanted wives on fire especially if they do not bring in enough dowry money. As for keeping down the population and seeing to it that every family has a fine male child to carry on the good name, why in India as we all saw recently on TV the murder of newly born girls is becoming quite acceptable.....

Yes India that land of religion; mysticism can teach us a lot if only we would listen.

A CLARIFICATION OF THE DEGRELLE - VATICAN CONFLICT

by Mary Ball Martinez

As the letter from P.M., Glasgow in the June 1994 issue of Candour suggests, readers of my book, The Undermining of the Catholic Church, find no difficulty in understanding the conflict between the Belgian patriot and the Vatican of Popes Pius XI and XII. From his 16th year until he was interned in 1939 for anti-war activity, Leon Degrelle owed Catholic loyalty to Achille Ratti, Pius XI.

This would have posed no problem had that Pope been truly in charge of Vatican policy. A scholarly librarian, Pius XI had supported L'Action Francaise, the movement which could have led to a Catholic state. He had inspired Mexican students to face death in the name of "Christ the King" in defiance of masonic anti-church laws and, on the eve of western Europe's war against the Soviet Union, had declared Marxism to be "intrinsically evil".

BRAVE INITIATIVES DEFEATED

Each of these brave initiatives met with prompt defeat, thanks to the dominance in the Vatican of this Pope's successive Secretaries of State; Pietro Gasparri, who manipulated both the French and Mexican crises, and Eugenio Pacelli (later Pius XII), who dedicated his long years in high office to alienating the faithful from all forms of nationalism.

Both Gasparri and Pacelli were trainees of the Sicilian nobleman Mariano, Cardinal Rampolla who combined his duties as Secretary of State for Leo XIII with those of Grandmaster of the particularly occult Ordo Templi Orientis. It was not only Pacelli's role as "spiritual son" of Rampolla, who personally directed the young Eugenio's education and took him as private secretary and travelling companion, but also his family background that motivated his political attitude. The Pacellis had come to Rome from Viterbo in the turbulent 1840's to arrange the first great loan to the Vatican by the Rothschild banking firm. (our italics).

NO PAPAL CRUSADE AGAINST COMMUNISM

Thus it was natural that Eugenio Pacelli should have been reported as showing "real bitterness" on learning that Cardinal Imitzer had blessed the ecstatic crowds of Viennese cheering the German troops who marched down the Ringstrasse one night in 1938. Not yet Pope, Pacelli ordered the Cardinal to retract his approval, and it was natural for Eugenio Pacelli, as Pope, in conjunction with Josef Stalin, to arrange the 1944 meeting, documented in my book, between Fr. Giovanni Baptista Montini (later Paul VI) and the top Italian communist, Palmiro Togliatti, during which the political strait jacket binding the political life of Italy these fifty years (right up to its on-going liberation by the wondrous Silvio Berlusconi) was mapped out. And again, it was natural for this Pope to boast to the College of Cardinals at the war's end; "as head of the Church, we refused to call Christians to a crusade" - and even - "we were determined that not one word of approval for the war against Russia was permitted to be said".

Regarding the "crusade", one learns in my book of the arrival of the French Cardinal Boudrillat at the Vatican to ask for a papal blessing on the Catholic Wallonia of Leon Degrelle, along with volunteer Regiments of French, Italians, Spaniards, Poles, Hungarians, Croatians, Slovenians, Slovaks and Cossacks in the company of young priests from Rome's Russicum Seminary, hoping to open long-closed churches, all on their way to join the German army in its struggle against Soviet Russia. The response of Pius XII was sharp rejection, a strong reprimand for the Cardinal and an order for total press censorship on the whole project.

Leon Degrelle and the other courageous leaders of the crusade from which few returned alive, would have been aware of the lack of a Papal blessing, but few officers or men could have known to what extent the Catholic Church had already been undermined.

ONE IN MANY, MANY IN ONE.

by Andrei Krylienکو

Is Europe to remain, or become once again, a community of Christian nations, standard bearer of culture in a civilised society? Or is it to be a Money Power preserve, market for the mass-produced output of multinationals and main drain for coloured immigrants, its culture and traditions submerged with theirs in the Disneyland mirage of well-being?

Union is an ideal which has haunted the mind of Europeans ever since the Roman Empire fell apart. Today union is a necessity if Europe is to hold its own in a world dominated by the Money Power and its multinational hangers-on.

The union of Europe is a vocation, which like any vocation can be fulfilled or betrayed. Europe lived up to its vocation when it created the civilisation of Christendom. The European Union with its Council of Ministers, its commission, its parliament and its technical agencies for the administration of the Old World is a betrayal of the vocation of Europe, transforming it into the province of a future world empire.

The proposed Ecu highlights the difference between the vocation of Europe and its destiny within the Money Power Empire. On the other hand, as the money of a union of independent nations, each making its own money with its own monetary standard and coinage, the Ecu, issued by the Union, could be a useful international exchange medium and an international monetary standard in terms of which member nations' exchange rates would reflect the solvency of their respective economy; on the other hand, issued by the Union to replace former national currencies, the Ecu will be a means of depriving the nations of their sovereignty. As the first Rothschild said, whoever makes the money of a nation, rules the nation. The Ecu planned by the technocrats will thus be the instrument and symbol of the absolute dictatorship of the Union over all its members.

As the Union is already three parts in existence and benefits from the aureole inherited from the Empires of Augustus, Constantine and Charles V, it would be a pity to let so rich a tradition be callously destroyed for the profit of the multinational mafia. Although the majority of the Brussels technocrats meddle in affairs that would be better left to national authorities, in sectors such as communications; rail, water and air transport; the protection of the environment, which obviously lend themselves to international regulation and control, the structure they are creating could be turned to good account.

Europe of Christendom an Anachronism

The sponsors of the Union are, however, unlikely to welcome any such rationalisation of the Union. For them the Europe of the nations, the Europe of Christendom which created civilisation, is an anachronism and an obstacle to their projects and profit. The independence and enterprise typical of the European temperament unfit the European for an establishment in which he is required to surrender his initiative to regimentation in his every activity, at work or leisure. Only Europe in which the individual is mentally and morally conditioned to moronic uniformity can provide the multinationals with docile manpower for their oversize trusts and ready consumers for their mass-produced output. As long ago as 1970, Edmond de Rothschild said "Western Europe..... is going to form a political federation..... the structure which has to disappear, the lock that has to be burst, is the nation"¹. In 1970, therefore, in the mind of the Money Power the nation as an institution was already obsolescent.

The rationalisation of the Union will not be easy. Its constitution places executive power firmly in the hands of the occult powers. An embodiment of the so-called "democratic" parliamentary system, the Union as it stands gives power without responsibility to the Money Power, which finances the election of its nominees who "represent" the member States. The word "nominees" is used advisedly, since the members of the Union Ministerial Council are ministers of the member States and the members of the Union Commission are State appointees, none of whom in the political world today can be other than loyal Freemasons or screened by the Brotherhood, and as such suitably subservient. The Union is thus from top to bottom a Freemason (Money Power) preserve.

There is, however, one exception. The Euro-Parliament, an elective body, although it has only advisory status, is none the less a forum - the only Union forum - in which outside opinion can be voiced. Lack of interest in Euro-elections is therefore regrettable, particularly as the Euro-Parliament can veto proposals drafted by the Commission for submission to the Ministerial Council. Gentlemen may be fish out of water in modern politics, nevertheless they should be encouraged to stand for election to the Euro Parliament. If the Union is to become a means of saving Europe of the nations, politics will have to recover their moral co-ordinates, within which gentlemen are more likely to be at home than the modern politician. Even a handful of independent members of the Euro-Parliament could form a team and put up a good performance in expressing and shaping positive opinion.

The first task will be to parry the ceaseless attacks on the three basic institutions of civilised society, the family, the nation and the Church. Defence of each is the defence of all. The need to restore normal respect for the family as an institution and for normal family life is as important for the nation and the Church as it is for the family. Patriotism and religion are best learnt in childhood in the home. Jews are among the most active sponsors of the legalisation of abortion, although it is forbidden to Jews themselves. Arabs rely for the conquest of Europe on the fertility of their women. The writing on the wall could hardly be plainer.

The Unholy Trinity

In the Church, the problem is both more complex and simpler. It is simpler because the Church is a divine as well as a human institution, and God is not mocked indefinitely. It is more complex, because it is all-embracing: Europe can only be understood as a product of Christendom and is only civilised in as far as it is Christian. The Church has always taught respect for the sanctity of the family as the basic cell of society and model of good government. In the virtue of patriotism it has seen the key to international peace and prosperity. That nations have the right to defend themselves but not to make unscrupulous self-aggrandisement their supreme aim is Christian doctrine which the Christian nations have, regrettably, long since ceased to practice. The Saint and King Ferdinand III of Spain, who spent his life driving the Moors out of Andalusia, was proud to say before he died that he had never drawn his sword in war against another Christian King.

Unsettled by the Renaissance, Christians listened to the promise of the Reformers who told them that through free-thinking they would become like Gods. The post-Reformation world is a product of this second Fall. After its tragic succession of wars, revolutions and endless injustice, the politicians, and not only politicians but also prelates, have lost their credibility. The establishment today is an (un)holy Trinity, the Godhead represented by Freemasonry, the son by Parliamentary Democracy and the Spirit, proceeding from both, by Corruption, and the Three are One.

When Catholics recognise that their Church is not that of the Money Power invested Vatican, but has to be sought again in the hearts of those who reject the heresies taught by apostate "popes", a first step will have been taken towards the reunion of all Christians and the provision of a new foundation for civilisation.

The European nations can either accept the loss of their identity and individual existence, or they can resume their historical vocation through genuine union respecting both their unity and their independence. In the latter case, theirs will be a union of ONE IN MANY AND MANY IN ONE, with common principles in matters of common interest and autonomy in matters within the competence of each.

Truth is its own power and the power most feared by the (un)holy Trinity. Faced with the prospect of tyranny more absolute than any known to history, recognition of the truth will be a first step towards a revival of religion, the family, the nation and civilisation.

AVAILABLE NOW: THE RED THREAD.

by Andrei Krylienko

The World Government Conspiracy, if only now openly avowed, has run like a red thread through history from the time of the invention of banking in Babylon onwards.

David Rockefeller, prominent in the Conspiracy, speaking at a meeting of the Bilderberg Group, held from 6 to 8 June 1991 at Sand in the Federal Republic of Germany, thanked the media - The Washington Post, The New York Times, Time Magazine and other papers - for the discretion they had shown during the previous four decades. It would have been impossible, he said, for them (the Conspirators) to have developed their project for the world if they had been obliged to work in the full blaze of publicity. Today, however, the world, more sophisticated, was ready to advance towards a World Government, eliminating war and ensuring peace and prosperity for all mankind. The supranational sovereignty of world bankers and an intellectual elite was, he asserted far preferable to the national self-determination practised in past centuries.

The story of the Conspiracy is briefly outlined in The Red Thread, a factual account looking forward to the day when the Conspirators, hitherto enemies of civilisation, will collaborate in the task of redeeming the time.

The Red Thread is available from Forest House, Liss Forest, Hampshire, England. £22 incl. p&p. Or from A.K. Marling, Bischof Faber Platz 6A/10, A-1180 Wien, Austria. 396 Austrian Schillings incl. p&p.

THE NEW BARBARIANS

As this issue of Candour goes to print it seems increasingly likely that the USA, under the aegis of the United Nations, is preparing to invade Haiti. This will be the first military action ordered by Mr "Bill" Clinton, as Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of the United States of America. At this juncture it is interesting to look at a few facts, whilst stressing that as far as Candour is concerned, there are NO "good guys" in this rotten scenario.

The junta in power, led by Gen. Raoul Cedras, and figureheaded by Prime Minister Robert Malval, is comprised of mulattoes, who in fact make up only 5% of the population of a nation that has never in its 500 year history known any form of democracy. The man that Clinton intends to replace this corrupt bunch of thugs with is "Father" Jean-Bertrand Aristide. This man spent time in a mental hospital in 1980 and has a history of mental instability. By 1991 he was taking 13 different drugs for manic depression. Aristide is also on record and film for inciting violence, including the hideous practice of "necklacing" (see S. Africa), which is the burning alive of a person by tying a petrol soaked tyre around the victim's neck, and setting it alight. Add to this charming duo the President of the United States, the draft-dodging, dope-smoking (non-inhaling!) New World Order stooge and prospective W.C. Fields lookalike, "Bill" Clinton and we begin to understand why in a recent poll 100% of Haitians asked, stated they want to leave immediately for the USA!

It would, one feels, be an ideal solution to dump all three in Port-au-Prince and let them get on with it but for the conviction that it would only redouble the efforts of 6,500,000 Haitians to row to the USA.

WHO OWNS HAITI? From the Wall Street Journal, May 30, 1992, "The embargo was placed on Haiti shortly after the coup to pressure the army and conservative elite to reinstate President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. Much wealth that remains is being concentrated in the hands of two families who have turned more towards imports than internal production." It said, "The Brandt and Mevs families dominate Haiti's oil, soap, meat processing, livestock feed, flour, rice, cement and raw sugar markets".

FACTS. The Brandt and Mevs are Jewish families who live in France. They are fabulously wealthy. They own all of the big money making companies in Haiti. They pay their black employees an average of 48 cents an hour. These families buy off which ever dictator is ruling the country. There is, of course, never any mention in the media about the Brandts and Mevs's.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Rosine,

thank you for the June Candour. Most enjoyed was the Tintin/Degrelle article. Tintin has been a favourite here since the children- were children. Now, grandchild Gregory is even more keen than perhaps any of his uncles, aunts and mum, ever were. Our books, rescued from storage, are all in the once 'hardback' format. Sadly, very much the worse for wear. I did not know of the Degrelle connection nor the intimidation thrust upon the author. Any chance you have a copy of "Tintin in America"? I would so like to read it.

"PROTAGORAS" has turned me against Swift forever since his recommendations re; Irish infants! However a bit further on in that article I was ashamed to find myself in laughter uncontrolled. Can't wait for "Part II"!

B.B. Hants.

Reply:- Thank you for your kind comments about the June Candour. In a future issue we will be concentrating on the vitally important area of literature for our children, and, look forward to stimulating thought and debate. What do Candour readers recommend?
